DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

Examiner acknowledges the response filed on 2/22/2008 containing remarks and amendments to the claims. A new rejection follows:

Allowable Subject Matter

The indicated allowability of claims 1-8 is withdrawn in view of the newly discovered reference(s) to Nakamura (US 4,725,922). Rejections based on the newly cited reference(s) follow.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC §§ 102/103

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
  2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
  3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
  4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.
3. Claims 1 and 6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Nakamura (US 5,725,922).

Nakamura discloses a silicon rubber composition containing a hydrocarbon oil. The hydrocarbon oil can be obtained through chemical synthesis. The concentration of the oil in rubber is from 0.1 to 20 parts by weight per 100 parts by weight of silicone rubber (up to 17%). It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to use 20% oil in silicon rubber because one skilled in the art would expect such a difference in concentration to exhibit the same properties (see MPEP 2144.04 VII.).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Art Unit: 1797

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
  2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
  3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
  4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.
4. Claims 2-5, 7 and 8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Nakamura in view of Cody (US 5,059,299). Nakamura does not disclose the kinematic viscosity, pour point, or CN number of the synthetic oil.

However, Cody teaches subjecting a synthetic wax to hydrocracking/hydroisomerization, separating the reacted product into lube cuts, and the lube fraction is then sent to a dewaxing step to obtain an oil having a pour point of less than -21 degrees C. It would have been obvious to substitute the synthetic oil from Nakamura with the synthetic oil of Cody because the substitution of the known oil of Cody with the oil of Nakamura would have had predictable results to one having ordinary skill in the art.

Cody does not disclose the claimed viscosity range or the CN number of the product oil. However, it would have been obvious to adjust the treatment of the synthetic wax to achieve a lube oil having desired properties.
